

Who are you? Who? Who?

Who really knew the truth about the murder? I thought I did. I considered myself a top-notch amateur sleuth, successfully solving a handful of cases for The Board. But there were others in the race to solve this crime, all seeking kudos that accompanies being number one. Several fragments of evidence were already revealing a challenging probe. Known facts to date were the “where” and “how.” That just left the “who.”

Several prime suspects were eliminated from contention. I'd basically nailed it down to two.

It was time to play my hand.

Professor Plum, in the library with the dagger!
